To whom it may concern,

I am writing to apply for a teacher teaching on call (TTOC) position with Langley School District (School District 35). As a motivated and passionate teacher candidate, I am eager to contribute to a supportive and engaging learning environment that prioritizes inspiring an innovative and unified learning community.

During my teacher education and practicum experiences, I have developed strong skills in lesson planning, classroom management, and differentiated instruction. I have designed and delivered curriculum-aligned lessons that accommodate diverse learning needs and encourage student participation. I value creating a safe, respectful, and curiosity-based classroom where students feel supported and motivated to learn and explore their interests within the context of the course.

My teachable subjects include junior sciences and biology, but I am open to TTOC positions in other subjects and other departments as I believe every new experience is a learning opportunity. In all courses, I am committed to inclusive, student-centered, and inquiry-based teaching practices. I strive to build positive relationships with students and collaborate closely with colleagues, support staff, and families to support student learning and well-being. I am comfortable using educational technologies such as Microsoft Teams, Google Classroom, and interactive tools to enhance instruction and engagement.

I am excited about the opportunity to join School District 35 because of its commitment to integrity, excellence, courage, inclusivity, and community. I would welcome the opportunity to contribute my enthusiasm, adaptability, and dedication to your school community.

Thank you for considering my application. I would be pleased to further discuss how my skills and passion for teaching align with the district's needs.

Sincerely,

Tasfia Ahsan
